The excitement of investigating and getting to the bottom of a situation has always drawn Catherine Garmo in.

She likes a challenge and believes every client deserves a thorough investigative deep dive into their case so she can represent them with all the facts under her belt.

With every new case Catherine works on, she brings excellent attention to detail and dedication to each client. Her thoroughness, critical thinking skills, and ability to investigate and research set her clients at ease, knowing she will always provide the full picture and leave no stone unturned.

To Catherine, family is everything. She has always looked up to her older sister and how she mediates problems and makes time for others. With her sister being an attorney, Catherine had an inside look into what life as an attorney would look like; and she could see herself living that life.

Catherine received her undergraduate degree in Business from Oakland University and attended the University of Detroit Mercy Law School. While in law school, Catherine was the Vice President of the Middle Eastern Law Student Association - Detroit Mercy Law Chapter (MELSA) and received the Insurance Law Book Award, an award given to those who receive the highest grade in their class.

When she is not working, Catherine loves to cook, specializing in Chaldean food. She lives each day to the fullest, spends time with her family as often as possible, and is a self-proclaimed foodie.
