Client-focused and trial-tested, Brianna Hines delivers practical strategies and effective defense in high-stakes insurance litigation.

Brianna focuses her practice on insurance defense litigation, where she applies her trial experience and disciplined case analysis to deliver strong results for clients. She approaches each matter with thorough preparation, identifying key issues, and consulting with clients to align on strategy. By translating complex legal issues into straightforward options, she helps clients make informed decisions about defenses and next steps.

Brianna has earned trial victories and successfully argued dispositive motions. Her courtroom skills are grounded in rigorous academic training and hands-on experience. Her direct communication style, paired with her ability to connect with both clients and colleagues, makes her a trusted resource throughout the litigation process.

Brianna earned her J.D. from the University of Detroit Mercy School of Law, where she held leadership roles in the Black Law Students Association. She completed her undergraduate studies in political science at Western Michigan University, with a minor in Spanish.

Brianna is driven by a commitment to professional excellence and public service. She is a member of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc., where she remains engaged in community-focused initiatives. Outside of work, she enjoys traveling, hiking, and exploring new restaurants.
