Bryan Padgett's passion is litigation and the adrenaline rush that comes from being in front of a judge and jury.

Whether he's managing his own insurance defense caseload of first-party no-fault, third-party automobile negligence, premises liability, and other personal injury claims, or assisting his colleagues with their cases, he looks for every opportunity to be in the courtroom.

Bryan earned his undergraduate degree in political theory and constitutional democracy from Michigan State University's James Madison College. He then went on to law school at the University of Detroit Mercy, where he was a moot court standout and served as the executive director of external competitions for the Moot Court Board of Advocates and vice president of the International Law Society, and received the Ferd J. & Lottie Chmielnicki Dean's Scholarship for academic achievement.

To supplement his law school classroom learning, Bryan secured internships with two other recognized law firms in Detroit and a clerkship with Judge Edward A. Servitto, Jr. of the Macomb County Circuit Court, and participated as a court-approved mediator in the UDM Mediation Clinic.

Bryan has been named as a Super Lawyers Rising Star every year since 2013, a testament to his skills, results, and professionalism. He is also an adjunct professor at University of Detroit Mercy Law School, where he teaches Advanced Advocacy.
