Kyle Warwick concentrates his practice on a wide array of civil litigation matters, including first-party no-fault, third-party automobile negligence claims, premises liability, fraud, workers' compensation, and insurance coverage disputes.

Kyle earned his undergraduate degree from Michigan State University. While in college, he clerked in the litigation department at a large Southeastern Michigan law firm. After graduating from Wayne State University Law School, Kyle joined a medical malpractice defense firm in Detroit, where he gained crucial skills in medical research, motion practice, and communicating with expert witnesses. Since joining the firm in 2016, Kyle has represented insurers and individuals in courts throughout Michigan. He enjoys writing about complex legal developments in a way that makes it easy for his clients to understand, and co-authored the No-Fault Survey of the Spring 2019 Wayne Law Review.

Outside of the office, Kyle enjoys time with his family and traveling to "Up North" in Michigan.
