Adam Post is driven by relationships and grounded in teamwork. He delivers on his commitments with unwavering loyalty and a sharp focus on achieving meaningful results. His consistent, reliable performance gives his clients the confidence to focus on their business, knowing he is relentlessly pursuing the best possible legal outcome.

Adam is an experienced insurance defense attorney with a diverse practice that spans first- and third-party automobile litigation, trucking and transportation liability, construction defect and negligence claims, premises liability, insurance coverage disputes, and defamation defense. He has successfully represented insurers, corporations, and individuals in complex civil litigation across Michigan.

Adam provides strategic, results-driven defense from pre-suit investigation through trial and appeal. He delivers clear, practical guidance at every stage and helps clients take preventive measures to reduce future risk. When litigation arises, he applies thorough case analysis and creative problem-solving to pursue efficient, cost-effective outcomes for his clients.

Adam regularly appears in both circuit and federal courts, where he is known for his professionalism, strong communication skills, and persuasive advocacy. His expertise as a trial attorney includes defending claims involving personal injury, property damage, bad faith, and insurance coverage under Michigan's No-Fault Act.

A Co-Chair of Zausmer's Associate Development Committee, Adam mentors junior attorneys and contributes to training initiatives that strengthen the skills of young and seasoned litigators alike.

Adam earned his undergraduate degree from Wayne State University and his law degree, magna cum laude, from the University of Detroit Mercy School of Law. He serves on the Board of Directors for the University of Detroit Mercy Law Alumni Association and plays in a Detroit-area lawyer hockey league.
