Jonathan Freshour focuses his practice on appeals, complex commercial litigation, and real estate disputes, drawing upon his background in appellate research and writing to distill intricate legal and factual issues.

Jonathan spent multiple years at the Michigan Court of Appeals, where he was responsible for drafting opinions on a wide range of legal issues. His writing has played a part in the development of both civil and criminal jurisprudence across the state, including opinions interpreting constitutional law, zoning and municipal issues, governmental liability, real property, contract disputes, and so on. His broad range of experience and detail-oriented approach enable him to tackle novel and multifaceted issues thoroughly and efficiently to achieve the best results for his clients.

Jonathan received his bachelor's degree in Political Science with honors from the University of Michigan Ann Arbor, where he chaired the Undergraduate Political Science Association and the Golden Key International Honor Society. Jonathan then earned his Juris Doctor, cum laude, from the University of Detroit Mercy School of Law. As a law student, Jonathan served as a teaching assistant in multiple legal theory and analysis courses, as well as an advanced advocacy course. In his second year, he received the school's annual Frank S. Sengstock Award for Excellence in Legal Writing for his submission to the University of Detroit Mercy Law Review. He also served as the student representative to the American Bar Association, and was the president of the school's LGBTQ+ student group, Outlaws.

Outside of the office, Jonathan enjoys spending time with his family and coparenting his cat and two dogs—Carol, Geoff, and George—with his partner. He further enjoys working in his vegetable garden, cooking, board games, and playing music.
